Quickly Removes Hairs Without Slightest Pain

(From Boudoir Secrets.)

Persons having unsuccessfully tried to remove downy growths from the skin will be interested in a powder called delatone. Enough is mixed with water to form a paste and spread on the hairy surface. After two or three minutes it is removed and the skin washed.

The ease and quickness with which this method removes every trace of hair or fuzz is most pleasing, and though drugs charge a dollar an ounce for delatone, it is worth many times its cost because of the absence of pain when using it and the satisfactory results always following. Care should be exercised, however, to see that you get the genuine delatone and not an imitation.

The next meeting of the chapter will be held on Wednesday of next week.

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT MAY BE CALLED HOME

Possibility of His Becoming Commander-in-Chief of British Army.

BY LA MARQUISE DE FOYENOU. LONDON, Feb. 7.—The Duke of Connaught accepted the appointment of Governor-General of Canada, it was understood that he would retain the office for two years. Instead of the customary term of five, yet it is on the cards that he may be summoned home before the end of the year to assume the post of commander-in-chief of the British army. There is a very serious talk of England on the necessity of reviving the office, with the object of putting an end to the scandals in connection with favoritism, in the matter of appointments and promotion, which have characterized the administration of the former office of commander-in-chief, by the so-called Army Council.

These scandals have become numerous that they all the columns of the press and had taken up a good deal of the time of the ministers, in answering questions, and offering explanations, when Parliament was in session. The necessity has become so frequent, as to be a serious cause for alarm, while the Duke of Connaught, who is falling further and further below this required number.

It is now generally admitted that the only way of restoring confidence in the army will be by doing away with the Army Council, which has proved a signal failure in the matter of the worst failures of Lord Haldane's lamentable and disastrous administration of the War Office. The Duke of Connaught, whose royal status rendered him insensible to social intrigues and manoeuvres, is a man of great ability, and as an uncle of King George, will convey, when he is commander-in-chief, the conviction that he will be able to put an end to the intrigues, personal spite and jealousies, and social manoeuvres which have been the cause of the ruin of the British army, who know him as a capable soldier, and as a singularly upright, high principled, and unflinching man.

Lord Haldane, merely adds to his popularity, not alone with the army, but with the people of the public, by being a field marshal, the age limit does not count, and he remains on the active list to the end.

That radical changes are impending in connection with the army, is positively known in political and military circles. England, even the supporter of the government are compelled to admit that the management of the War Department, and of the Cabinet, its chief cause of unpopularity, and its principal source of weakness.

Only two officers are spoken of in connection with the command-in-chief, namely, the duke, and Lord Kitchener, is badly needed now, and will be for some time to come, in Egypt. And then, too, the duke is a man of great diplomacy, of patience, and of tact, which he displayed under the most trying conditions, until forced by his sense of self-respect to give up all idea of military employment, as long as Lord Haldane remained in office.

It will be found in the impending session of Parliament that the condition of the army, upon which the safety not only of England, but the entire British empire depends, will prove the most important and most vital issue superimposed upon the tariff, and of the Lloyd-George schemes.

Colonel Lowther, military secretary of the Duke of Connaught, and who accompanied the prince on the occasion of his recent visit to New York and Washington, has written a book, in a mourning shared by his brothers, Sir Gerard Lowther, ambassador at Constantinople, and James Lowther, of the House of Commons, through the death of their wonderful old father, the Hon. William Lowther, at the advanced age of ninety.

Mr. Lowther, who celebrated his golden wedding, to the daughter of the first and last Lord Wensleydale, seven or eight years ago, was a brother of the third Lord Londale, an uncle, therefore, of the present duke. He was an ardent supporter of the British embassy at Berlin, as far back as 1841, was first secretary of the embassy there, at the time of the accession of Prince William to the throne of Prussia, and of the appointment of the then Herr von Bismarck to the Prussian premiership, and was the most distinguished of the time when the Civil War in this country was brought to a close.

He was in the diplomatic service in 1868, to enter Parliament, where he represented his native county of Westmoreland throughout the following century. He was a member of the House of Commons, and when he returned to London, Lord Bessington, to which she replied, with an inquiry of the same character, "El vous, sir?" (And when you return, sir?) which in view of the precarious nature of his tenure of the throne of France, and the possibility of being compelled to seek refuge in London once more, was, to say the least, a neat reply.

The Lowthers have been prominent for centuries in Westmoreland, Cumberland and Yorkshire, taking their name from the many streams of water that run through the woods of Lowther Park in Westmoreland. "Lowther" meaning, in Anglo-Saxon, "clear running water." The Londale peerage was several times created in favor of the Lowther family, and is often became extinct. In the eighteenth century the Viscount Lowther of the day was raised to the Earldom of Londale, at the instance of Lord Bute, the unpopular minister of George. This James, Earl of Londale, married Lord Bute's daughter, who died, childless, in 1802. It is said that he had left vast possessions to a very distant kinsman, Sir William Lowther, of Swillington, in Yorkshire. This Sir William Lowther was immediately created Earl of Londale, and thereupon surrendered to John, who was created a baronet by George IV., and is the great-grandfather of young Sir Charles Bingham Lowther.

The Speaker of the House of Commons, James Lowther, now that he has succeeded to his father's estates, may be regarded as carrying out, without further delay, his intention frequently expressed of late to retire from his present office. As an ex-Speaker of the House of Commons, he is, in accordance with time-honored custom, to be raised to the peerage as Viscount, and receive a pension of £25,000 a year for the remainder of his life. (Copyright, 1912, by the Brentwood Company.)

East-Lawson. (Special to The Times-Dispatch.) A South Boston wedding was celebrated at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Merced Steele, of Andover, acted as best man. The wedding march was played by Mrs. Robert O. Craddock, and a vocal solo was rendered by Mrs. T. C. Watkins, Jr., of this place.

The ceremony being performed by Justice Wenden, Mr. Bright is a son of the late Daniel Bright, of this county. Mrs. Bright is the daughter of Mrs. Susan A. Mansfield, of Greenleaf Street, and has a host of friends.

Davis-Monroe. (Special to The Times-Dispatch.) Elizabeth City, N. C., February 7.—A wedding in this city yesterday afternoon, Miss Mary C. Davis, aged eighteen, and Robert E. Davis, aged twenty-five, both of Norfolk, Va., were married by the Rev. J. H. Dean, of the Baptist Church. Mr. Davis is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel M. Davis, of Savannah, Ga., and Mrs. Davis is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Monroe, of Norfolk. They returned later in the afternoon to Norfolk, where they will reside.

H. Creider, of Roanoke, was appointed temporary receiver for the court.
